The Dead Sea is a large lake that lies partly in Israel and partly in Jordan. It is also the lowest place on the surface of the earth, lying about 399m below sea level.

It is called the Dead Sea because it is excessively salty, water is inhospitable to most forms of life. There are no fish in its water, and the mineral-laden water is believed to be beneficial to health. Many people go there to bathe and there are many health resorts in the area. The salt water gives great buoyancy to the water. One floats back in the water as one would on a soft bed, with no risk of drowning.
